Bayou Community Foundation and Second Harvest to Host “Bayou Region Summit on Hunger” October 8

Event will promote greater awareness of growing food insecurity in our community and cultivate new initiatives to address this critical need.

Bayou Community Foundation and Second Harvest Food Bank will host the first-ever “Bayou Region Summit on Hunger” on Tuesday, October 8 to increase awareness about food insecurity in Lafourche and Terrebonne Parishes and Grand Isle, and to strengthen efforts to address hunger in our region. Participants will include local nonprofits, government agencies, churches and other volunteer groups involved in providing food and other services to the needy in our area.

“We often think of hunger as a problem for other countries or an issue in larger cities, but hunger is also very real here in our Bayou Region,” said Bayou Community Foundation President Stephen Peltier.

“In recent years, Bayou Community Foundation has experienced a substantial increase in grant requests from local organizations who provide food to the needy as economic conditions have forced more and more of our local residents to rely on food banks and other organizations to feed their families,” Peltier said. “The Bayou Region Summit on Hunger will shed some light on this growing need and cultivate new initiatives and partnerships to help close the meal gap. Bayou Community Foundation is excited to work with Second Harvest Food Bank to begin this critical community discussion.”

“Second Harvest Food Bank provides more than 2.7 million meals annually to children, families, and seniors in Lafourche and Terrebonne Parishes and Grand Isle through our local partner agencies,” said Second Harvest Board member Ruth Boulet of Larose. “Our partners include food pantries, churches, mobile pantry sites, schools, and programs for children and seniors in locations throughout the Bayou Region. We know, however, that just meeting the need requires that we double the number of meals we provide. We look forward to the Bayou Region Summit on Hunger to better understand the unmet need, strengthen our partnerships, and work towards building a thriving community.”

According to a 2017 data from nonprofit organization Feeding America, 11,630 residents of Lafourche Parish and 16,000 residents of Terrebonne are food insecure, meaning they lack the financial resources to provide adequate and regular meals for their household. Included in this number are 11,260 children.
